Major agreements could emerge as superpowers set summit date

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President George H. W. Bush and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev will meet for a super-summit in the United States beginning May 30, U.S. and Soviet officials said Thursday as the two sides broke new ground on Germany on the Middle East.

Accepting the principle of unifying East and West Germany, the Soviets said away from their demand that a merged country be neutralized, and Soviet officials reported at the end of a long day of bargaining on tough regional issues.

And, in another potential breakthrough, the Soviets said they would consider restoring diplomatic relations with Israel and permitting the direct flight of Jews to Tel Aviv if they had assurances the refugees would not be settled on the West Bank and in East Jerusalem.

Earlier, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said several major agreements could emerge at the summit, including a long-sought Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty to limit long-range nuclear weapons.

But Bush said merely that the summit would provide "time for a lot of dialogue and a lot of discussion."

Officials on both sides acknowledged that in the more than seven weeks remaining it would be difficult to forge agreements across the board of U.S.-Soviet relations.

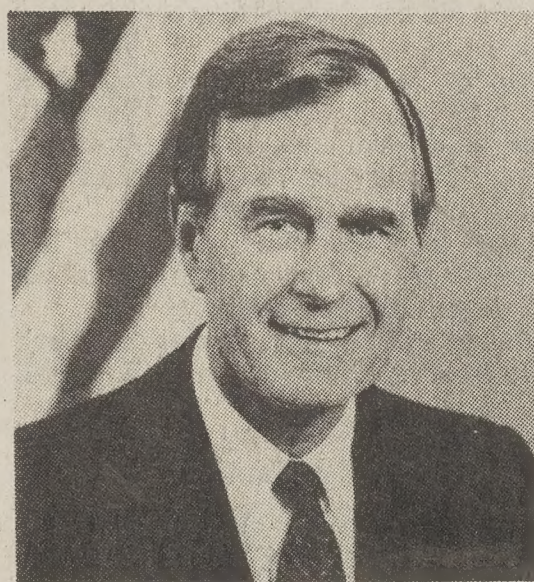

But a group of U.S. and Soviet regional experts, working at the direction of Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze, achieved surprising progress on Germany, the Middle East and also the wars in Angola and Afghanistan.

The Soviets insisted, as they have in the past, that the pace of merging East and West Germany is too fast. However, a U.S. official told reporters, "we also got the impression a neutral Germany is not the only answer to security questions there."

Confirming the development, a Soviet official briefing separately said "we think neutrality may be the answer, but we invite people to supply us with other ideas."

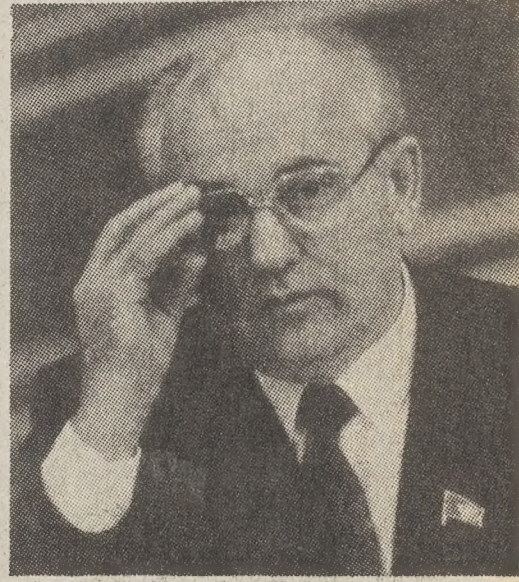

He said Moscow's aim was simply that a unified Germany should "be no danger to its neighbors." In the Middle East, the Soviets continued their attack on Israel for settling Jews on the West Bank and in East Jerusalem, territory that the Arabs held until the 1967 Six-Day War.

However, the Soviet offer to resume relations with Israel, which were suspended in 1967, and to open direct flights of refugees to Tel Aviv provided they do not settle in the disputed lands "was a different kind of response than we heard before," a U.S. official said. The briefings, held in a State Department auditorium, were conducted under rules that prohibited identifying the officials.

Display tells how women shaped Utah

By JOHN D. BEAMAN

BYU Archives and Manuscripts opened a display in conjunction with Women's Conference that honors women of Utah from the 19th century.

Women played an important part of the development of Utah. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints that will be felt by generations to come, said Craig Foster, a student assistant archivist.

The display focuses on the accomplishments of women in early Utah in education, medicine, politics and the women's suffrage movement. Two banners from the women's suffrage movement are part of the display, which features photographs, journals, poetry, letters and women's publications.

The early women of the LDS Church had a newspaper, called "The Women's Exponent," which was published and produced exclusively by women. It covered women's topics, such as the women's movement, education and women's rights.

Many of these women were not active in Church organizations such as Relief Society, but they were active in all aspects of social and political life," Foster said.

One of the earliest letters found in the display is from Eliza R. Snow, who wrote the words of the hymn "O My Father," and was one of Utah's first Ladies of poetry.

Memorabilia of the political activities of Utah women are also shown. Emmiline B. Wells, who later became the fifth General Relief Society President of the LDS Church, was the vice president of the women's suffrage movement in Utah.

Craig Foster, a graduate student in library science displays, shows some of the artifacts featured in the display, which honors women's efforts in the development of Utah. The display is in 5030 HBLL. Included in the display are two banners from the women's suffrage.

Wells was a close associate of Susan B. Anthony, the national leader of women's suffrage. Universe Archivist Dennis Rowley said Wells, who traveled extensively and gave speeches throughout the United States, was the first Utah woman to achieve political prominence.

Amy Brown Lyman's political work is also represented. She was the General Relief Society President from 1940-1945. Her certificate of election to the Utah State legislature is featured in the display.

Foster said the Relief Society is well represented in the display. "The ladies' organization was more independent in the early days of the Church," he said.

LeGrand Baker, curator of the archives, said the Relief Society also had its own grain storage and distribution programs, and some local Relief Society organizations even had their own buildings.

Elvira Barney, one of the many women doctors in Utah, is also represented. Foster said, "Medicine was a field that was dominated by women in 19th century Utah." Women felt that was an area in which they were particularly good, and a number of early women doctors such as Barney and Ellis R. Shipp were sent East to learn medicine and returned to practice in Utah, he said.

A display case on the main floor of the library features the work of another woman doctor. Elizabeth Kane, wife of Civil War general Thomas L. Kane, visited Utah with her husband, who was a personal friend of Brigham Young and other LDS Church leaders. Kane's letters to her family were published in a book, "Twelve Mormon Homes." It gives an interesting account of the women of early Utah, said Baker.

Panel examines mother-daughter bond

By SHAUNA PIERSON
Universe Staff Writer

Thursday in an afternoon session of Women's Conference, a panel of women discussed mother-daughter relationships and the potential influences these relationships have on choices women make.

The women said mother-daughter relationships have an impact on a daughter's self-worth, her pursuits, her involvement in community and in her choice of a career or motherhood.

A mother's regrets are built into her advice to a daughter, said one panel member, Tessa Meyer. "Sometimes a mother advocates what she never had, whether her experience is negative or positive. Her life disappointments, her hopes determine whether she encourages her daughter to go out and pursue a career, continue her education, have a family or a combination of both."

Meyer said the role of women has changed over the years. "Young women now have more options considered to be legal and viable. In my mother's time our worries were whether to get married at 18, 19 or 20. Today I worry about whether to continue my education and get my Ph.D or stay home and start a family. How do you combine these roles?"

LaMyrl Sandholtz, a mother and panel member, said our problem as women, as mothers and daughters, is that with these options we try to do everything all at once. "Most of you young women have the opportunity to prepare for a career, you can have marriage and a family, you can even have a career, but there may be times in your life where you can't do it all at once," she said.

And so putting aside one thing of value for another thing of value at a particular time in our lives is necessary to live realistically in the world," she said.

Cristi Butler, another panel member, said "Your mother is an important role model. How your mother fulfills her role will determine how you will fulfill your role as a mother."

Butler said the challenges a mother extends and the support she gives determine a daughter's willingness to try new things and become involved in the community.

The Environmental Protection Agency has asked the forest service to deny Seven Peaks Resort a building permit.

James Scherer, regional administrator of the EPA, sent a letter to the forest service which says, "Our concerns with air quality and wetlands have not been adequately addressed in the Final Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) or the Record of Decision (ROD)."

Until there is sufficient evidence that this project will not delay the attainment of the standards for carbon monoxide and PM10, this

EPA says more evidence needed to gain permit

permit should not be issued," Scherer said.

Al Mickelsen, Provo City planning analyst, said a traffic study was done by Wayne T. Vanwagoner and Associates which shows the increase in traffic pollution will not pose a problem.

"They are the experts and we have to rely on them," he said.

Burnell Corder, director of the Utah Bureau of Air Quality (BAQ), said "Provo is doing what it needs to get approval for the resort."

The mitigation measures Provo City is using to reduce the impact of increased carbon monoxide and PM10 pollution "will more than offset problems of air quality," he said.

However, Corder said the BAQ will require some additional data showing the effectiveness of mitigation measures as a result of concerns raised by citizens in the Wednesday night hearing.

The Utah County Clean Air Coalition said redesigning traffic corridors, creating one-way streets and other mitigation measures might reduce the pollution caused by Seven Peaks.

However, "all easily accomplished air quality improvement plans will be used and further improvement of carbon monoxide levels may not be easily possible," the coalition said.

The coalition said unless pollution levels can be controlled the EPA will be required to develop a control plan which may involve sanctions against future economic development.

Utah called the second healthiest state in the nation because of the lifestyle

By MARCI WILCOX
Universe Staff Writer

The executive director of three Inland Northwest Health Care hospitals said Utah is the second healthiest state in the nation at the Provo/Orem member of Commerce all-member luncheon Thursday.

Mark J. Howard, who oversees the activities of more than 2,500 employees and 100,000 patients each year, said the better health of Utah can be attributed to the lifestyle which is practiced here.

"Over the years we have had 14 AIDS patients, all of which have died. Only one of those patients contracted AIDS from a blood transfusion which she received in Saudi Arabia," Howard said. The other cases were a result of each victim's lifestyle.

Insurance policies should be sold on the basis of an individual's lifestyle, Howard said. People need to watch what they eat, exercise and keep track of their cholesterol levels. "My goal is to die young at a very old age."

"Half of our hospitals are running in the red," he said. "Our hospitals write 24 cents off every dollar and can't continue like this much longer."

In the United States there are 35 million to 37 million people between the ages of 18 and 65 who have no health benefits. In order for hospitals to survive, more federal funding, longer employee hours and healthier public are needed, Howard said.

"In the future, hospitals need to decide whether to spend $350,000 on one artificial heart, or warn lots of people to take care of their hearts," Howard said.

Former club proprietors file suit against owners

By SUZANNE CONDIE
Universe Staff Writer

The former owners of the Ivy Tower dance club have filed a $55,000 lawsuit against the new owners of the club and plan to file a suit against Provo City accusing city officials of harassment and other civil rights violations.

Stan Elwood and Scott Rosenberg filed a lawsuit Wednesday against I.V. Enterprises Inc., charging the company with trademark infringement in regard to the use of the Ivy Tower name.

The dance club's former owners also said they plan to file suit against the City of Provo, an Oklahoma-based savings and loan company and a real estate company within four to six months.

"The city sanctioned our business under a law our lawyers haven't been able to find. Our lawyers say that's hogwash," Elwood said.

Elwood declined to specify the amount of money they would ask in damages, but said it would be "a substantial amount."

Elwood said the city harassed him and his partner when they were operating the club and took away their license to operate the club, which was in violation of Utah's constitution.

He said under the state constitution, local governments are not allowed to take businesses away for the types of violations Elwood and Rosenberg were accused of. "They can fine, but they can't take businesses away. That can only be done by the state," he said.

Elwood said a citation against him and Rosenberg regarding alcohol consumption by minors was thrown out of state court for lack of evidence.

The alcohol consumption citation and complaints by neighbors about noise prompted city officials to put the business under a temporary use permit which allowed the Ivy Tower to operate. The permit was to be revoked by the city at the first violation of its stipulations, Elwood said.

Chet Waggener, chief administrative officer for the City of Provo, said the temporary permit was nearly identical to the club's previous operating permit and permits needed by other businesses in the same zone as the Ivy Tower.

However, Elwood said the temporary permit reduced the number of days the club could operate, restricted the clientele of the club to those 18 and older, and required the club to hire three off-duty police officers for security. Before, the club had only one security officer a night.

Waggener said the original use permit required the club to hire three off-duty policemen, but said he couldn't remember the other requirements of the permit. He said Elwood and Rosenberg's loss of their license to operate had nothing to do with personality conflicts, as Elwood claims.

Pres. Lee addresses issue of hiring best possible faculty

Editor's note: This is the first part of a report on the faculty question and answer session with President Lee. The next part, including his comments on the ramifications of the enrollment ceiling, will appear in Tuesday's Daily Universe.

Concluding his response, he said that the options included "making sure that things that matter very much to us are not being impeded by things that don't matter quite so much," and suggested that future corrections may be made at the department, college and university levels.

In a follow-up question, another faculty member asked if it was true that members of the Board of Trustees consider the Utah Legislature's appropriations for state schools when figuring BYU's base salaries, and if so, he wondered if they knew that the actual amount of money those schools work with is much higher.

President Lee said his impression was basically correct, although BYU does not try to match the numbers dollar for dollar. He agreed that there is an influence because we live in Utah, but said he believes that the true situation has been adequately explained to the trustees.

A number of other funding-related questions were raised. In one, a faculty member wanted to know if there was a mechanism for keeping a valuable visiting faculty member when there was no slot available. President Lee replied that there was, and referred him to the academic vice president's office.

That was also the appropriate avenue for another who asked about the requirement that the central administration approve donations for research before they are solicited or accepted. President Lee said faculty members should use their common sense when soliciting, but that is still necessary to maintain some distinctions in the types of funds BYU gets.

Universe Services

There is no more important issue facing the university than its ability to hire the best possible faculty, President Rex E. Lee told a faculty audience Wednesday.

"It's going to affect the entire quality of the university. A university's faculty is that university," he said. Responding to a question about compensation, President Lee said that "(BYU's) ability to attract and maintain a faculty that's going to be just as good as the student body that we are inevitably going to have over the next decade" is at least related to faculty salaries and benefits, though not totally dependent on them.

President Lee added, "There is a limit to the extent to which we can continue to attract and keep people by showing them Mount Timpanogos and singing them the college song." He said some studies done by BYU show that faculty compensation is competitive at the entry levels, but does not do as well at the higher ranks. He also said that salary gaps are uneven among colleges.

"The amounts of money needed to correct that are not small," he said, but it is a problem that must be faced and dealt with. To meet this and other financial needs of the university, President Lee said the administration is exploring a number of possible options; he also solicited suggestions from the group.

De Klerk, Mandela agree to formal talks

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — President F.W. de Klerk and Nelson Mandela agreed Thursday on a new date for formal talks between the government and the African National Congress on giving blacks a share of political power in South Africa.

The president and the ANC leader met for three hours. The date of the formal talks was not announced, and the two did not appear together after the meeting.

Before the talks began, de Klerk accused Mandela of dissuading black homeland leaders from meeting with the government as scheduled Thursday. In addition to Mandela, de Klerk had been scheduled to meet with six homeland leaders, but four did not show up. "That choice was not voluntary in any sense of the word," de Klerk said before his talks with Mandela.

The talks were intended to discuss black factional violence that has left hundreds dead in recent weeks and to help prepare for formal negotiations on a new constitution to give blacks a share of power in South Africa.

Mandela and other ANC leaders have called for unity among all black political factions in order to present a solid front at eventual negotiations with the white-minority government.

However, many South African officials and observers believe the ANC canceled the meeting because of disagreement within its ranks about how to proceed with negotiations.

Marches prevented in Tiananmen Square

BELJING — Authorities staged all-day rallies in Tiananmen Square on Thursday, China's annual day for mourning the dead, preventing unofficial visits to the symbolic center of last year's crushed democracy movement.

It was the second time in a week city officials held official activities in the square as an excuse for closing it to the public.

The method appeared successful. There were no reports of attempts to lay wreaths near the square or otherwise honor the hundreds and possibly thousands of people killed June 3 and 4, when the army opened fire on pro-democracy protesters and retook the square where they had camped.

In Hong Kong, however, an estimated 20,000 people marched in honor of the Beijing dead, many carrying banners or bouquets of flowers.

Chinese dissidents abroad, through faxes and mailed leaflets, urged Beijing residents to stroll through Tiananmen Square on Qingming in memory of the slain protesters.

State Hospital needs money to get staff

SALT LAKE CITY — Utah State Hospital, just weeks away from possible Medicaid decertification, has been unable so far to find enough money to pay for additional staff demanded by federal officials.

Superintendent Bob Verville said the hospital has been told by the Health Care Financing Administration that it has until June to comply. At stake is roughly $6 million in Medicaid funding, about one-third of the hospital's budget.

The state Department of Social Services and the Division of Mental Health asked legislators during the last session to appropriate $974,000 to hire the 36 staff members needed to meet federal standards. However, lawmakers adjourned in February without coming up with the money.

If the hospital is decertified, it could lose 150 of its 340 beds. Medicaid funds would be lost for several patients, including children, adolescents and geriatric cases. The mental health system may have to close down 25 beds, probably from the adult general psychiatric population, Verville said, and shift staff to improve patient-staff ratios.

Police closing in on LDS chapel vandal

Police expect to make an arrest in the case involving the vandalism of a LDS chapel in the Salt Lake City Avenues area soon.

"We know who it is; it is just a matter of getting him," said Lt. Steve Chapman of the Salt Lake City Police.

Chapman said police expect to have a suspect in custody late Thursday or early Friday, although more than one individual may have been involved.

Vandals tore out windows to enter the church and then destroyed pianos, organs and display cases. Also, anti-Mormon slogans were spray-painted on the walls, said Chapman. Several unspecified items were also taken in the break-in.

Chapman said damage is estimated at more than $15,000.

LDS Church spokesman Don LeFevre said church authorities were "saddened and disappointed that anyone would desecrate a house of worship."

BYU baseball team to play home opener

Today marks the first home game series of the season for the BYU baseball team as they take on the Rainbows of the University of Hawaii in a noon doubleheader.

The Cougars have already played 30 games in their season and all of them have been on the road. The Rainbows, who have played 32 games in their season, have not yet travelled away from home. "We are very excited that we're finally playing at home," said Coach Gary Pullins.

Hawaii is traditionally a tough team in the Western Athletic Conference. Each year BYU, San Diego State University and Hawaii seem to be battling for the WAC championship, Pullins said.

Pullins said Hawaii has a good running game and it is something the Cougars will have to work hard to offset. Senior Randy Winstead said that Hawaii's pitching staff is also one of its strengths.

The first game of the doubleheader will begin at noon today. Another two game, seven-inning series will also begin at noon on Saturday. Students can see the game for $1 or purchase a season pass for $5.

Post office to take late mail on April 16 due to tax deadline

By BROCK STOUT
Universe Staff Writer

The post office will accept mail later on April 16 for people still working on their taxes when the deadline arrives, the postmaster said.

Richard Woolums said the post office will accept mail until midnight on April 16, past the normal 7 p.m. postmark time for accepting mail. "We get a lot of people who wait until the last minute," he said.

Woolums said the new post office in East Bay and the main post office at 95 West 100 South will both temporarily extend the cutoff time. The Orem post office at 222 West Center street will also keep the lobby open until midnight, said postal employee Peggy Bird.

Woolums offered some suggestions to make sure tax returns arrive on time. First, make sure the return has sufficient postage. The IRS and State Tax Commission don't pay postage-due costs, so returns will go back to the sender and be counted late if sufficient postage isn't on the envelope.

Woolums said returns not securely sealed may get caught in processing equipment and be torn. The return could also fall out of the envelope. He also said the return address is important in case it is returned.

Jan Hadley, public affairs officer at the Internal Revenue Service, said late returns are subject to a 5-percent-per-month fine if taxes are owed. "A good rule is that if you don't have time to get it together, file for an extension." The state honors IRS extensions for state taxes. People with questions can call the IRS toll-free number 1-800-424-1040, she said.

The State Tax Commission number for filing questions is 1-800-662-4335, said Janice Perry, community relations director. Common filing mistakes are arithmetic errors and forgetting to put spouse's social security number. "The most common mistake is not signing the return," she said.

Federal tax forms can be obtained by calling 1-800-424-3676, but it takes a week to arrive in the mail. "That is cutting it pretty close," Hadley said, so she recommends going to the federal building in Provo to pick up a form. A report issued by a tax preparation firm said anyone who owes additional taxes must file a tax return. Anyone who will receive a refund and anyone who qualifies for an Earned Income Credit must also file.

Spring semester features classes on female issues

By SUZANNE CROWE
Universe Staff Writer

Most of BYU Spring courses focus on women's issues has been combined and distributed through the university's Women's Research Institute, said Marie Cornwall, head of the institute.

"We've tried to encourage all major in the university to include sections, or even entire courses focusing on the past and present roles of women in their field," said Cornwall.

Cornwall said the subjects are being emphasized in order to encourage women and men to better recognize their differences and deal with their roles in society.

Larry Jensen, BYU psychology instructor for a class titled "Sex Roles in the Family and Society," said, "A major part of this course will be centered around identifying gender differences and what they imply for sex roles."

Jensen said the most recent leaders in the feminist movement have reacted against the efforts of earlier leaders. "Historically, the feminists tried very hard to minimize the differences between men and women in order to justify more unified social roles," he said.

"The modern feminist movement seeks more to identify and acknowledge the differences between men and women," he said.

"Understanding these differences helps men and women to predict and better deal with their contrasting perceptions of the world. The goal in seeking an understanding of these differences, however, is that we will realize that innate differences are not a reason to discriminate against any gender," Jensen said.

Kate Kirkham, a faculty member in the Marriott School of Management who teaches a class called "Diversity and Discrimination," said, "Classes which highlight women's contributions and issues are important because they lend access to both an academically legitimate body of knowledge, and they also give students valuable perspective for the future."

Kirkham, who also works as a business consultant to help organizations identify the needs of minority groups and possible prejudice behavior among management and employees, said, "Organizations today have three main ways of responding to the needs of women, or minorities within their companies."

"Some wait around until an incident, such as a formal complaint or lawsuit calls their attention to the needs of a minority group. Others simply become aware of the laws and try to stay within them," she said.

"The more innovative companies, however, become pro-actively involved — investing time and money into discovering the needs of minorities within their company as a means of assuring productive work environments," she said.

Kirkham said her class will help students to understand both their own tendencies toward discrimination and how to most effectively deal with them in others as managers.

Law students sponsor cancer research 5K run

By PAISLEY P. MILLER
Universe Staff Writer

Students will have a chance to exercise and to help raise funds for the American Cancer Association on Saturday.

The Rex Lee Run for Cancer Research, a 5K intra-school competition, will be begin at 9 a.m. in the J. Reuben Clark Law Building parking lot.

The sponsors of the event include the J. Reuben Law School Student Bar Association, the American Cancer Association, Blue Cross/Blue Shield, and other community businesses.

Kristine Keala, a member of the Student Bar Association, said the run is an intra-school competition and each department or college is encouraged to get as many people as possible to participate in the run.

Each department will receive participation points for students who compete and finish the run. The college with the most participation points will be declared the winner, although no prize will be given.

There is a $7 fee for students and $10 fee for non-students to sign up for the race. All entries will receive a Rex Lee Run for Cancer T-shirt for participating, and all proceeds go to the American Cancer Association to help fund cancer research.

David Leavitt, vice president of the Student Bar Association, said the run is not too difficult; the course is fairly flat and winds around campus and the BYU stadium.

A 5K race equals 3.1 miles. Wallace Johnson, a second-year law student helping register participants, said participants do not have to run the whole course, but can walk too.

Students wishing to participate in the run can sign up in college departments or at a table set up outside the Twilight Zone by the Checkerboard Quad.

Y-Day unites BYU and Utah Valley in service efforts

By CAROL YAGER
Universe Staff Writer

BYU students, administration, faculty and the Utah Valley community are uniting efforts in service this Saturday in BYUSA's Y-Day.

"Publicity and support have been great, so we are hoping to get a huge turnout," said Chris Boyce, BYUSA executive vice-president in charge of Y-Day.

The weekend will begin Friday night with "The Wild One, Y-Days Campus Party." The dance will take place in the ELWC Ballroom from 9 p.m. to midnight. "Class Edition" will be performing in the Ballroom and comedian John Bytheway will perform in the Memorial Lounge.

"Class Edition" consists of three brothers and one sister who have been performing together for 14 years.

Saturday at 8 a.m. students participating in the service projects are either to meet with their wards or meet in the parking lot of the J. Reuben Clark law building. From there, students will be bused to various locations of service projects.

The service projects range from visiting nursing homes to planting trees and browse bushes and cleaning up litter. There will be about 15 buses taking students to the various locations, so students are encouraged to be at the JRCB parking lot by 8 a.m. sharp.

Those students not knowing where their ward has been assigned can either go to the Y-Day information booths today or they can just show up Saturday morning, Boyce said. If students sign up at the booths to attend Saturday, they can also get a free Y-Day bandana.

Most of the projects will be done by 11 a.m. or noon. Following the service projects participants are invited for free ice cream and games at Deseret Towers Field.

"We want to help people celebrate their service," said Karen Yager, director of the afternoon activities. There will be football, volleyball and water volleyball games for all students.

At the afternoon activities, students will be given a $2 discount for the Pigskin Preview football game in Cougar Stadium at 1 p.m. The weekend's activities will conclude with a dance in the south Stadium Parking Lot from 8 p.m. until midnight.

Graduate starts card company

By REBECCA K. ARGYLE
Universe Staff Writer

Chris Martin may have received a degree in organizational psychology from BYU last year, but her two introductory art classes inspired her to start her own company after graduation — a greeting card company.

"One of the teachers, a graduate student, really inspired me," Martin said.

"He told her that she had the best line drawings he had ever seen. That gave her so much confidence," said Linda Mayer, Martin's mother who assists in marketing the cards and controlling the finances.

What started out as requests from family and friends turned into a successful greeting card company that distributes in five western states.

Martin's husband, Scott, a BYU graduate in horticulture, also helps market the cards. The company is based in Eugene, Ore., hometown for both Chris and Scott.

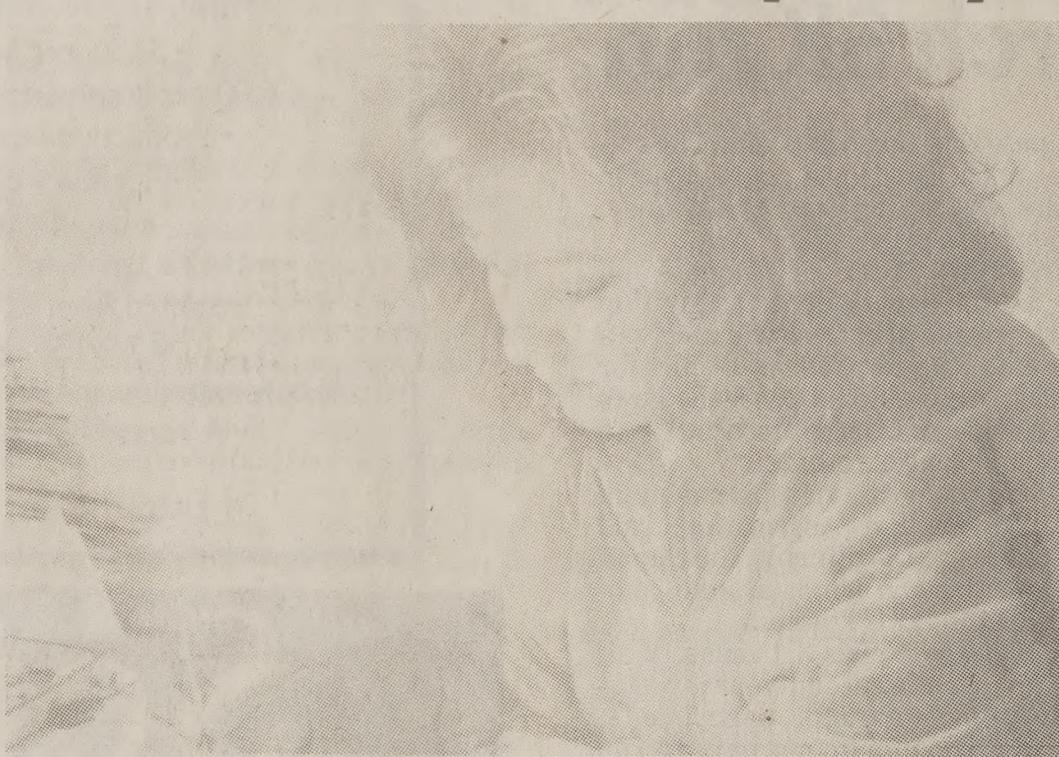

"We have orders in Utah, Oregon, California, Colorado and Washington. I have 10 people who work with me as sales representatives," Chris Martin said.

Her designs are line drawings painted with watercolor. They are available as note cards, enclosures, stationery and framed prints.

"I only use messages on the seasonal cards. The remaining cards I leave blank because I want to keep my designs simple," she said.

Chris Martin has approximately 40 designs on the market. Some designs take only 15 minutes to draw from beginning to end.

"I don't go out and search for ideas. They just come to me. If my husband brings home flowers, I'll draw them," she said.

Chris Martin began selling her cards to friends and students at BYU in the fall of 1986.

This led to supplying cards for BYU Craft & Floral and local shops including the Flower Basket and Lizzie Thorn's General Store, all of which she still supplies.

"BYU Craft & Floral has sold out of the cards twice since January," she said. Until November, all of the cards were hand-painted by Chris and her mother.

"We wanted to hand-paint them all but it became too much work. It's less expensive to have them commercially printed. Hand-painted cards sell for $1.50 each where printed cards are $1.25," Mayer said.

When it was determined that the cards were selling and could be a profitable business, Chris and Scott consulted with Ron Hirsche, owner of Elephantz card company in Ogden.

"He assured them they had a good product and encouraged them to have the cards color printed," Mayer said.

"I met with him for three days during printing. He made suggestions but I had complete control," Chris said.

"We had to invest $5,000 in printing but we had $20,000 worth of orders. This year should be a good year. We expect to make a profit," Chris said.

Hirsche told them not to expect to make money the first year.

They aren't making a lot of money yet, but at least they have the satisfaction of doing what they want, Mayer said.

Fireside on life of Christ to be presented Sunday

By KATHERINE HANSEN
Universe Staff Writer

A musical fireside relating the last days of Christ will be presented Sunday in the Varsity Theater, ELWC, at 7:30 p.m.

"His Last Days" is the story of the crucifixion of Christ told through a slide show, a first person narration and six singers.

David Thieme, producer and co-director, said, "Our overall goal is to touch peoples' lives and give them a light to hold onto."

Thieme said the group was established in October of 1988.

"I produced this fireside to give individuals who have been blessed with the gift of voice the opportunity to share their testimony through music. 'His Last Days' provides this opportunity."

"A majority of the cast are BYU students. They originally volunteered 15 to 20 hours weekly to form the group and they now practice about six hours weekly," Thieme said.

Gregg Vance, a 24-year-old senior from Mesa, Ariz., majoring in finance, is a member of the cast.

"It is always a pleasure to take the time and share the gospel through music. If students will take the time, the fireside will be worth seeing," he said.

"The presentation includes a collection of slides taken from all over the world depicting the life of Christ. They are each unique and tailored to the musical numbers," Vance said.

Thieme said the group's main theme is, "Everytime someone somewhere follows the light within, then there's truly cause to celebrate."

The group will also be performing in the Varsity Theater on April 22.

Folk/Bluegrass ensemble to perform on Saturday

By KAREN ORTON
Universe Staff Writer

The BYU Folk/Bluegrass ensemble will entertain listeners in a performance Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in the Madsen Recital Hall, HFAC.

The program will include "Soldiers' Joy," "Billy in the Lowground," "Buck's Run," and "Up and Around the Bend," as well as original tunes written by members of the group.

The ensemble was organized during the fall of 1982 to supply BYU's International Folk Dancers with a band that could travel on tour.

Some of the members toured Russia, England and Poland with the folk dancers.

Director of the ensemble, Karl Allred is a former member of the Utah Symphony and has been a fiddler for the past eight years. He was named State Fiddle Champion in 1987 and 1988.

Allred said he became interested in bluegrass when he was performing with the Utah Symphony.

"I was playing classical music but I liked the bluegrass style and wanted to learn."

"I got together with a group of fiddlers that were in Utah and learned the songs one by one."

"Most of the students who enter these classes have had very little experience with country fiddle of bluegrass music," he said.

"They are given many opportunities to develop the skills required to adeptly perform," Allred said.

"There are only two classes offered at BYU that teach bluegrass style music."

One is for students that have had experience playing the music, the other is for people that want to learn it."

Bluegrass music originated in Kentucky in the 1930s when Bill Monroe invented his knee-slappin' style.

Popular at first in the South, bluegrass has now spread in popularity to the whole country.

The instruments that will be played in the concert include the fiddle and the bass fiddle, mandolin, guitar, banjo, harmonica and a set of kitchen spoons.

The concert is free and open to the public.

Roberts verbally commits to BYU

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY—Bingham's two-time 4-A Most Valuable Player Kenneth Roberts will follow in the footsteps of brothers Glen, Fred and Steve and play basketball at BYU.

BYU coach Roger Reid "was shocked, but happy when I called him Tuesday night and verbally (committed) to BYU," said Roberts, who had been leaning toward Utah and Kansas.

"It came down to the fact that I wanted to follow in my brothers' footsteps in playing at BYU. And I wanted to stay close to home to play basketball. All my brothers wanted me to play at BYU," he said.

Reid earlier gained letters-of-intent from Emery's 7-foot-5 Shawn Bradley and Richfield's Ryan Cuff. Roberts and Bradley both went to Washington D.C. to play in the McDonald's Capitol City Classic for the U.S. All-Stars.

"I'm sure there are a lot of shocked people," said Roberts, who had made recruiting trips to Arizona State, Kansas and Cornell. "I had been leaning toward Utah and Kansas. Both Kansas coach Roy Williams and Utah coach Rick Majerus are class guys and I respect them an awful lot.

"BYU had always been in the back of my mind, but not to the extent that Utah and Kansas had been.

"I didn't have to make a trip to BYU, because I've always known about their program," he said.

Roberts, at 6-foot-8, averaged 25.9 points, 13.3 rebounds, 3.9 as-

Racquetball teams take 8th in nation

WENDY SECRIST
Universe Sports Writer

The BYU men's and women's racquetball teams placed eighth among 50 teams at the Collegiate World Championships in Berkeley, Calif., last weekend.

"It was great — an experience that is hard to match," said coach Sylvia Sawyer. "I am so proud of the team, I could just burst."

The BYU women's team was fifth and the men's team placed 18th.

"The team did really well, there was a lot of support (among the team)," said team captain Val Shewfelt.

Sawyer said the team was hurt by poor seedings going into the tournament.

"Everybody came up against a No. 1 or No. 2 player pretty early," said Shewfelt. "But that's just the luck of the draw."

In the women's division, the top two BYU competitors were knocked out of the tournament early because of difficult seedings, Sawyer said.

"But the lower division girls really came through," she said.

"The girls played out of their minds. I think they surprised even themselves," Sawyer said. "I hadn't even dreamed they could play that well."

Most of the men players were frustrated by difficult seedings. However, they still competed well, Sawyer said.

"The boys played above and beyond what they were capable of playing. They struggled, but they overcame," Sawyer said. "They probably got the wins they did get by exerting effort they didn't think they had."

Sawyer was awarded a gold medal for Outstanding Contribution to Collegiate Racquetball by the tournament sponsors, The American College Racquetball Association and the American Amateur Racquetball Association.

"For me, that was the highlight of the tournament," Sawyer said.

This year was the second time BYU has competed in the Collegiate World Championships. "Last year we were 11th, and that was our first try," Sawyer said.

First place in the women's division went to Memphis State University. Southwest Missouri State University took second place and Providence College took third place. The University of Arizona beat BYU for fourth place.

Sloan, Malone respond to accusations

Associated Press

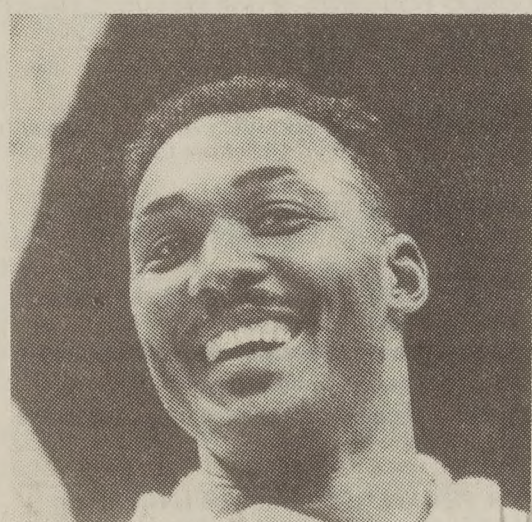

SALT LAKE CITY — Sure Karl Malone gets upset about the physical jabs once in a while, says Utah Jazz coach Jerry Sloan, "but he takes his lumps."

The Jazz forward "probably dishes a few out, too. But rightfully so," Sloan said. "He isn't dirty. He doesn't hurt anybody and, hey, when you go down there where he's working, you've got to take your warm-up racket off."

Sloan was responding Wednesday to blistering remarks made by Charlotte coach Gene Littles.

Following Tuesday night's 127-104 win over the Hornets, in which Malone scored 36 points and grabbed 13 rebounds, Littles accused Malone of overly physical play, lack of defense and too much talk directed at the opponents' bench.

"He hasn't won any championships. When he wins some championships and shows me some rings, maybe I can say he's a great player," Littles said.

After the game, Malone said, "Here's a guy who doesn't even know what post-up guys do."

Asked about the comments before the Jazz headed to Seattle to play the SuperSonics Thursday, Sloan said, "Obviously, people get upset with any player who has that success."

"But I've always felt this way. Why yell and complain about other players? As a coach, you have enough to worry about with your own," he said. "I try not to talk to the other (teams') players and I appreciate it if others don't talk to ours. Everybody has his opinion. I just think it's a little unprofessional. It'd be like coaches jumping on each other," he said.

"As far as Malone being too physical and getting away with it, Sloan said, "He takes his share and he's pretty quiet about it."

Golf team to play in California

By RODNEY ROBINSON
Universe Sports Writer

The BYU men's golf team will compete in two important tournaments during the upcoming week. The Cougars tee off in the Fresno Classic today, then travel to Santa Cruz Calif., to compete on Monday through Wednesday in the Western Intercollegiate tournament.

BYU is a young team with no seniors and only two juniors among the top 12 golfers.

In the last 28 years, the men's golf team has won at least one tournament each year. So far this year, the Cougar's best finish has been third place.

The Fresno Classic hosts a field of 19 teams including top-ranked Arizona State and No. 4 Arizona.

"We're not expected to win the Fresno Classic so that takes a little pressure off us," said BYU's Jason Thomas. "We're looking pretty good going into this tournament. I think this will be our breakthrough for the year."

BYU had intense qualifying rounds to determine who would make the team for these tournaments. The team is looking for consistency in its rounds. Ramon Brobio said, "We always do well in practice rounds, but when we get to the tournaments, two guys will have good rounds and the other three don't play as well."

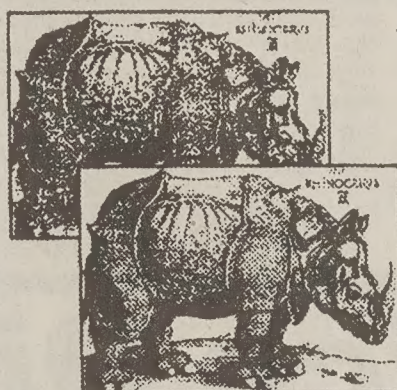

BYU will play 54 holes at the San Joaquin Country Club in Fresno. After the Fresno Classic, the team will move on to the 54-hole Western Intercollegiate tournament in Santa Cruz. The team will compete on the Pasatiempo Country Club golf course.

"This is one of my favorite tourneys," Brobio said. "If we finish in the top five in Fresno, we'll be the favorite in Santa Cruz."

BYU must do well in these two tournaments to get a bid for the NCAA regional tournament in New Mexico.

Idaho scientists perform cold fusion

By AMY K. STEWART
 Senior Reporter
 and Associated Press

An experiment conducted in the basement of the Idaho State University physical science building has produced a cold fusion reaction different from the one performed at the University of Utah, ISU physics professors announced this week.

Kenneth Faler and Stanley Vegors performed the cold fusion experiment March 13.

"I was very surprised — this was our first time doing this particular experiment," Faler said.

Vegors said, "We were happy with it, but it is just the preliminary results. We are trying to go back now and look for spurious effects."

The fusion experiment ISU professors performed was different from the one University of Utah did a year ago. "It appears we have produced cold fusion reactions in a different way — there are now two techniques," Faler said.

The Pons-Fleischmann device consists of a palladium electrode wrapped in platinum wire and immersed in deuterium oxide, or heavy water, then charged with electricity.

The ISU experiment is a physical process in which deuterium gas stored in a bottle is absorbed into titanium metal at low temperatures and low pressure. As the metal heats up, it emits electrons, Faler said.

"The emission of neutrons is generally believed by the scientific community to be an almost positive guarantee that nuclear reactions have taken place," Faler said. "Such a reaction, if it takes place on a large scale, might be able to produce enormous amounts of energy."

But the fusion is very erratic, Faler said. "We don't know how to control it — sometimes it occurs and other times it does not," he said.

John Knox, acting director of the Idaho State physics department, said although the fusion experiments are important, science requires that results be repeatable.

"I'm still skeptical about cold fusion in the original sense that was talked about a year ago, but it appears something is happening," Knox said.

The Idaho report confirms the discovery of a phenomenon reported recently by a group of Italian scientists working at the Frascati research laboratory near Rome, Faler said. The ISU information was compared with the Italians' findings in a March conference at the National Cold Fusion Institute in Utah.
